WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 - [Special.] -This week there comes from the press of publication is so mmed because of the fact the employees of the government, excluding | the great streams here are marked by is fully to per cent larger than the one published two years ago. The "Official Register," as it is entitled, is compiled and printed every other year. In the first volume are found the names of all the legislative, executive and judicial officers of the government, excepting the postoffice department, and in the second the postoffice department has all to itself.

An Interesting Volume. The first volume is naturally the most in teresting one. it comprises nearly 1,300 pages and gives the annes, office, where hore, whence appainted, where employed and compensation of all the officials and imployees of these three great branches of government, with their well nigh inte of the United States. The treasury department then comes in with a mighty rush of names. No fewer than 240 pages are filled with its pay roll, comprising a total of about 19,000 employees. Of course these people are not all employed in Washington. They are in the customs, internal revenue, revenue marine, lighthouse, life saving, steamingst Inspection, subtreasuries mints, assay offers, public buildings and other services throughout the country. The treasury is generally considered the most important department of the govern-ment, though the postoffice department has a greater number of employees.

The war department runs the treasury a close race, having 208 pages, four-fifths of these being employed in the engineer de-partment at large, in the construction of haring break waters, on song boats, Mississippl and other river embandments, etc. The compensation of the majority of these laborers is given at $1 or $1.20 per day, the former rate prevailing throughout the southern states. The names of privates in the army are not given, but the list of com missioned officers and post chaplains fills R.T. DAVIS MILL CO., St. Joseph, No. 30 pages, with about 100 names to the page.

The navy department fills more than 100 being those of employees at the navy yards and mand stations. A design pages are re-quired to contain the names of the 1,800 commissioned officers of the navy.

A Great Index. One bundled and fifty pages are occupied by the employees of the interior depart-ment, which has grown into charming proportions. It comprises the Indian office, the census, public bunds, railroads, pensions, patents, etc. Twenty-live pages are filled with the names of amploymed in the big pension office alone, or 2 000 persons.
